Call for Proposals for Hosting the Global Conference on Myositis (GCOM) 2028

The International Myositis Society (iMyoS) will be reviewing proposals for hosting the seventh GCOM meeting in 2028. While preference would be given to a proposal from a continent different from the preceding meeting place, the overall objective would be to organize a multidisciplinary meeting that focuses on clinical medicine as well as on basic and translational research, addresses all forms of myositis, promotes collaborative studies, supports and fosters participation of trainees, and will be international in scope.

A 3-day format is preferred, but could be discussed, as well as the month of the conference, in particular to reduce conflicts with other important professional meetings. A hybrid proposal will be preferred. Close collaboration and use of the infrastructure of GCOM and iMyoS is expected.

Proposals for hosting the GCOM 2028 meeting should highlight the planned focus and structure of the meeting, a proposed location and possibly venue and local organizers, with preference for an interdisciplinary team to lead the meeting. Please include any other aspects of your meeting plan that would be important to consider, and the specific reasons why your proposal should be selected.

⇒ Please send a short description of your proposal (maximum two pages) to the secretariat of iMyoS at info@imyos.org by 26 Feb 2024.

⇒ Your full application should be presented during the annual meeting of iMyoS at GCOM 2024 in Pittsburgh. Please indicate the presenter (ideally on-site, possibly remotely; max. 5 min.). iMyoS members will determine the winning host city by live and online voting.
